prisoned in County Jail.

Judge Hall this morning adjudged William H. Sherman to be in contempt of court for failure to pay his wife's attorneys $30 as heretofore ordered by the court. Upon motion of Mrs. Sherman's attorneys, Mr. Sherman was cited to appear last Friday and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt, but he failed to appear, so he was today adjudged in contempt of court and ordered imprisoned in the county jail for a period of 15 days or until the further order of the court.

The commitment was turned over to a deputy sheriff who is now looking for Sherman to take him into custody.

They came from the Warm Springs and Farmers ward, Fort Douglas and Frogtown on the west. They also came attended. Generally the big and dignified scion of a noble race of St. Bernards was accompanied by a very small boy, while the black and tan pup was led at the end of the string that had at the northerly terminal a husky red-haired northerly terminal a husky red-haired lad.

The occasion of all this gathering was the parade of the Tom Show cast which was scheduled at high noon. Headed by Held's band the procession traversed West Temple to First South, east to East Temple street, thence north to the Deseret News to countermarch to Second South, where the band swung east to State and countermarched again to East Temple street, then south to Third South and west to West Temple. On the way a halt was made to serenade each newspaper office. The line of route was thronged, especially at the Intersections of the streets, Held's band nearly broke a blood vessel in making the welkin ring with lively airs, while the populace amused itself in "bawling out" the various occupants of the carriages. Especially lavish was the fickle crowd in its attentions to Eliza's dead little baby, who took up five-eighths of the second carriage sight in the tentions to Eliza's dead little baby, who took up five-eighths of the seat in the second carriage right in the center of the stage and the limelight. At the Vienna cafe the baby was presented with a handsome bouquet of parsey fresh from the fish refrigerator and of an aroma that made the horses break into a frenzied trot. Uncle Tom, Ophelia, Topsy, and especially little Eva, also were the recipients of handsome bouquets of sego lilies, vegetables and other hot house buds.

But after all, it was the dogs. They were the attraction. Such a large and profuse variety ne'er before congregated on the streets, and the dog catcher wept briny tears as the gazed on the profuse variety ne'er before congregated on the streets, and the dog catcher wept briny tears as the gazed on the scene. Of course Morris Sommer's Toughy had to butt in. He opened the ball bright and early in the game long before the parade started. The saucy little thing walked right up to a big St. Bernard that wasn't doing a thing and attempted to throw him over his left ear. Then the big dog jumped on another his own size, while two youngsters at the end of their respective ropes were unwittingly drawn into the vortex shelly yelling for help. In about two seconds there was a bale of hair, more or less, scattered to the winds while, sad to relate, the youngsters used words not acquired in Sunday school. It looked as though the canine population of Salt Lake would be depopulated until a small boy with a very large whip whaled in on the yelping bunch and the wall of the castigated, both caninue and human, rose to the turquoise sky.

Eventually the parade started in all

Then came the band, the cast in carriages, members of the press cast in carriages, members of the press acting as a secret service escort for the big brewery wagon with its team of four white horses, a hack containing samples of molasses nuggets that at stated intervals precipitated an incipi-ent riot among the gamins who were out after the goods—then the dogs. At 2 o'clock the judges were still fighting for their lives. The indignation that went up every time they look, at at another dog was quite embarrassing. When it came to the giving out of the tickets all hands were swamped and Mining Expert Hague really said things that he should not have said in the presence of children during the process. The crowd at the "Tom Show" tonight will be one of the greatest which has ever entered the Salt Lake theater. To provent confusion, it is therefore absolitely essential that all should come early—not later than 8 o'clock, otherwise the performance is likely to be greatly delayed. There will be at least a half-hour's entertainment in the souvenir program, which will be dishibuted to amuse the audience while waiting for the curtain.

Those who have not already purchased tickets will not have a chance to see the show unless they go above the lower floor. A number of "gallery parties" have been organized among society people, and the entire upper part of the house prohises to be filled, the crowd there including some of the best known people of the city.

NARROWLY ESCAPED AN AWFUL CALAMITY.

Salt Lake City, June 8.

To the Editor: I was much interested in the account given in Saturday's "News" of the eventful career of Mrs. McCune and it called to memory the testimony of her husband's father when in New York, that if it had not been for obeying the Gospel his whole family would have been wiped out of existence. I heard his statement at different times in the ms statement at different times in the "Mormon" office in New York, I think about 1857. He had come from India and arrived too late to go with that season's emigration so had to stay there with his family till the next season. He practised as a homeopathic physician and was very kind and attentive to the poor.

He resigned his position with the East India company, which was then the principal governing power, and with whom efficient service meant a position for life. They came by way of England to New York, and it was either after his arrival in England or in New York that the news came of the mutiny and that every European without regard to age or sex, in the city where he had resided, had been murdered. He stated that when he heard of it he hardly knew for some time what to think or do for he realized what would have been the fate of himself and family had he remained there. He made this statement in the presence of myself and many others, some of whom will probably remember it if they are still with us.

Coursey, a machinist employed at the Salt Lake Machine company. The woman, who was about 30 years of age, killed herself by taking a large dose of strychnine. She died in horrible agony about thirty minutes after taking the deadly dose. Dr. Beer was called in soon after the woman took the poison and, although he worked with her for fully half an hour, his efforts to save her were unavailing. The exact cause of her rash act could not be learned, as the husband refused absolutely to talk about his family matters, but judging from the tone of three notes she wrote just before tak-ing the poison, it may be inferred that her domestic life had been extremely unhappy.

She has a sister, Mrs. C. E. Frank, residing at Muscador, Wis., and a brother, George W. Castlebury, living at Cannon City, Col. To both she wrote letters of farewell. She also wrote to letters of farewell. She also wrote to her husband, bidding him good bye. According to the statement of the husband to Sergeant Eddington, Mrs. Coursey left home last evening, presumably to go to the butcher shop. The husband never saw his wife alive after that. She failed to return home last night, and this morning, Mrs. Coursey returned home after her husband had gone to work. She went into the house and cleaned the place thoroughly. She then took a bath and only partly dressand cleaned the place thoroughly. She then took a bath and only partly dressing herself, laid down on the bed after locking the dcors, and took the poison. When she was seized with convulsions she began to scream. Several of the neighbors heard her screaming and ran to the dcot. By that time the unfortunate weman was shricking for help. The neighbors called to her and told her to unlock the door. She replied that she could not and begged them to break the door in. The door was forced open and the weman was found writhing on the bed in convulsions. Sjodahl, executor under the will, who asks that letters testamentary be issued to him. The deceased died in this city on June 1, leaving an estate consisting of real and personal property valued at $3,250. The will recites that there were two children, a son and daughter, born to the wife of decedent, but that neither of them have been the bed in convulsions. Dr. Beer was hastily summoned but by the time he arrived, the woman was unconscious. The physician worked with her for some time in an effort to revive her, but she was too far gone, and about 11:30 she died. The police were quickly notified and Sergeant Eddington hastened to here or not.
